1 I. INTRODUCTION

2 Nearly two years ago, this Court issued a permanent injunction ordering Defendants U.S.
3 Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS), U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement
4 (ICE), and U.S. Department of Homeland Security (DHS) to cease their pattern or practice of 5 failing to respond to Plaintiffs’ and class members’ requests for Alien Registration Files (A-Files)
6 within the statutory deadlines mandated by the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA). Defendants
7 now seek relief from their legal obligations under that injunction for Track 1 and Track 2 requests
8 for half a year, and, as such, seek a reprieve from the mandatory directives of the FOIA statute.
9 Defendants’ motion is governed by Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 60(b) and corresponding case
10 law, and not, as Defendants contend, 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(6)(C). That FOIA provision provides only 11 a defense to FOIA processing during active litigation, and this Court already rejected its 12 applicability here. Defendants do not cite, nor are Plaintiffs aware of, any legal authority allowing 13 a losing party to re-invoke an already rejected legal defense after issuance of a final judgment and 14 order.

16 Under either standard, however, the Court should deny the motion on the merits.
17 Defendants have not demonstrated that temporary relief from the injunction’s mandate—that 18 Defendants comply with the statute and timely process A-File requests—is warranted.
19 Defendants’ arguments regarding the practical difficulties of complying with the statute simply 20 repeat themes that this Court previously addressed when granting the injunction, and they do not 21 in any way justify relief from complying with the FOIA statute. First, the work to comply with 22 the injunction is less onerous now as ICE has no backlog and USCIS has more staff and funding.
23 Second, Defendants cannot show that the increase in A-File FOIA requests was unanticipated or 24 unpredictable as the agency has experienced similar percentage increases in the past. Third,
25 Defendants’ mismanagement—including Defendant ICE’s failure to route over 13,500 requests
26
27
28

1 to USCIS for processing and Defendant USCIS’ ongoing failure to adequately staff A-File FOIA
2 processing—are largely responsible for Defendants’ inability to maintain substantial compliance
3 with the injunction. Most importantly, relief from this Court’s injunction would harm Plaintiffs
4 and the tens of thousands of class members who depend on timely receipt of their Track 1 or 5 Track 2 A-File FOIA requests. This Court should not grant Defendants leave to return to their 6 practice of disregarding the statutory timeline that is so critical for Plaintiffs’ access to essential 7 documents.

9 Defendants alone bear responsibility for their failure to comply with the injunction, and 10 none of the circumstances on which they rely, individually or collectively, warrant relief from the 11 injunction which this Court ordered nearly two years ago.

12 II. BACKGROUND

13 A. The Court’s Summary Judgment Order and Permanent Injunction

14 As this Court has held, “[c]ompliance with FOIA’s deadlines is especially important in 15 the immigration context: it provides an essential safeguard to plaintiffs who require a copy of 16 their A-Files to pursue immigration benefits or defend themselves or their clients against 17 removal.” ECF 89 at 5. This Court recognized that Defendants have systemically failed to comply 18 with the FOIA deadlines imposed by Congress and, consequently, concluded that “[a] 19 comprehensive remedy is needed and long overdue.” ECF 89 at 1. The Court ordered that 20 comprehensive remedy as part of its summary judgment order nearly two years ago, in December
21 2020. Specifically, the Court issued a permanent injunction, ordering Defendants to: (a) cease
22 failing to adhere to FOIA’s statutory deadlines; (b) “substantially compl[y]” with eliminating 23 both USCIS’ and ICE’s backlogs within 60 days of the order, i.e., by February 17, 2021; and (c)
24 provide the Court and class counsel with quarterly compliance reports until further order of the 25 Court. ECF No. 89 at 24, 27; ECF No. 90 at 1-2. Defendants appealed the Court’s order to the 26
27
28

1 U.S. Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit, see ECF Nos. 94 & 95, but subsequently voluntarily
 2 dismissed that appeal, see ECF 110. As such, the Court’s December 2020 summary judgement
 3 decision and permanent injunction order constitute a final judgment in this case.

4 B. A-File FOIA Processing Since the Court’s Permanent Injunction Order

5 Defendants recap USCIS’ and ICE’s FOIA processing statistics and efforts as reported in 6 their quarterly compliance reports, ECF 138 at 4-5, but their recap does not paint the complete
 7 picture of what the agency has been doing with respect to A-File processing and why it has been 8 unable to achieve substantial compliance during the majority of the 1 year and nine months that 9 the Court’s order has been in effect. The following chart demonstrates the agency’s reporting
 10 over the last seven compliance reports:
 11

Following Defendants’ First Compliance Report, ECF 97, the Court indicated that it was pleased with Defendants progress “although [it] recogniz[ed] that additional improvement is still necessary,” ECF 100. Although Plaintiffs requested that the Court order Defendants provide more detailed compliance reports, including data specifying the completion and percentage of A-File FOIA requests processed within the twenty-day statutory period, see ECF 98 at 5-6, the Court declined to do so, ECF 100. Following Defendants’ Second Compliance Report, ECF 104, the Court congratulated Defendants on achieving a substantial compliance rate of 99.3%, ECF 107.

In its Third Compliance Report, Defendants achieved a similar compliance rate of 99.14% and informed the Court that ICE’s backlog “remains at zero” as ICE and USCIS renewed their memorandum of agreement whereby USCIS processes A-File FOIA requests received by ICE and/or containing documents in which ICE has equity. ECF 114 at 3. The Court again congratulated Defendants on achieving substantial compliance and cancelled the case management conference. ECF 116.

Defendants’ Fourth Compliance Report indicated that their compliance rate had dropped

26
27
28

¹ Defendants claimed that “excluding requests recently transferred by ICE, USCIS received approximately 80,000 additional requests for A-Files.” ECF-132 at 6; ECF 132-1 at 2. Unlike in prior reports, Defendants provided an approximation, not an exact number.

² Defendants reported that USCIS’ A-File FOIA backlog, excluding the misrouted requests, is 1,884. ECF 132 at 6; ECF 132-1 ¶5. But this number failed to account for the 1,366 misrouted requests that were still “in process,” all of which are well beyond the statutory deadline. See ECF 132 at 5; ECF 132-1 at 4. Thus, the correct backlog number is 3,250.

1 markedly to 51.45%. ECF 119 at 3. Defendants provided five reasons allegedly beyond USCIS’
2 control for the drop: (1) lack of overtime funding; (2) end-of-year staffing shortages due to 3 USCIS’ “use or lose” leave policy; (3) “substantial increase in FOIA requests compared to the 4 same period in prior years”; (4) competition for resources and staffing within USCIS; and (5) the 5 FOIA department’s failure to retain and hire adequate staff. ECF 119 at 4-7; ECF 119-1 at ¶9.
6 Plaintiffs expressed concern that many, if not all, of these reasons were predictable and are the 7 same reasons that led the Court to issue a permanent injunction. ECF 120 at 4. The Court later
8 “express[ed] disappointment,” but noted that Defendants told the Court that “the decrease reflects 9 a temporary setback and that steps have been taken to markedly improve the compliance rate.”
10 ECF 122. Absent improvement, the Court put the Defendants on notice that “other measures . . .
11 will need to be considered.” Id.

14 Defendants subsequently reported in their Fifth Compliance Report that they increased the 15 compliance rate to 72.13%. ECF 125 at 4. Defendants reported that USCIS was converting 25
16 temporary one-year positions to permanent positions and seeking to hire 24 full-time, permanent 17 positions. Id. at 4-5. Defendants indicated that they had utilized overtime funding, temporarily
18 assigned employees from USCIS’ Refugee, Asylum, and International Operations Directorate
19 (RAIOD) and from within USCIS to FOIA processing. Id. Plaintiffs expressed concern that these 20 types of stop-gap measures, which USCIS has long utilized, failed to sustain substantial 21 compliance rates in the past and necessitated the permanent injunction and that Defendants still 22 remained significantly behind achieving substantial compliance. ECF 126 at 3-4. The Court was 23 pleased with Defendants improvement. ECF 130.

25 On May 9, 2022, Defendants notified the Court that three weeks earlier, in mid-April, 26 Defendant ICE “discovered that approximately 10,00 FOIA requests for A-Files had been 27 improperly submitted to ICE and then inadvertently not forwarded to USCIS.” ECF 131 at 2.
28

1 Defendants did not state for how long A-File FOIA requests had been accumulating before ICE
2 noticed the error.

3 In Defendants' Sixth Compliance Report, Defendants indicated that the actual number of 4 mismanaged requests was 13,597, i.e., over 3,000 more than the initial approximation. ECF 132
5 at 4. Yet again, the compliance rate dropped, this time from 72.13% to 60.25%. ECF 132 at 6.
6 At the July 5, 2022 Case Management Conference, the Court "caution[ed] the government that 7 the current compliance rate is not adequate" and despite its good faith actions to improve 8 compliance, "the amount of improvement is inadequate given that access to A Files, which are 9 necessary for appropriate due process, can only be gained via FOIA request." ECF 135.
10

11 On July 25, 2022, following notice and comment, Defendant USCIS changed the form
12 used for requesting A-Files (Form G-639), and, on information and belief, also changed the 13 interface on its FOIA Immigration Records System (FIRST) web portal for requesting A-Files.
14 Plaintiffs' believe that these changes discourage FOIA requestors from asking for A-Files in two 15 ways: (1) by informing requestors that A-File requests take longer (notwithstanding that the 16 injunction mandates that such requests take no more than 30 business days); and (2) by omitting a
17 check off box option to request the entire contents of an A-File while including options to request
18 certain types of documents/applications within A-Files (which is particularly problematic for pro 19 se requestors who may not understand that requesting their entire A-File is an available option).
20 Compare Exh. A (p. 2; Part 3 of the prior Form G-639, dated June 20, 2019) with Exh. B (p. 3;
21 Part 1, Q2 of current Form G-639, dated July 25, 2022); see also Exh. C (screenshot of FOIA
22 FIRST).³ This development is concerning, particularly given Defendants' acknowledgement that 23 A-Files are by far the most frequently requested USCIS record, see ECF 75-2 at ¶18; 71-26 at 6-
26
27

28 ³ On information and belief, the FOIA FIRST interface previously had a check box option to request the entire A-File but subsequently eliminated that option.

1 7, and their repeated representations that FOIA FIRST was intended to expedite A-File
2 processing. See, e.g., ECF 75 at 5 (“FIRST has numerous features that maximize efficiencies and 3 speed up processing”), 15-16.

4 The Ninth Meckley Declaration, attached to Defendants’ Seventh Compliance Report,
5 evidences a compliance rate of just 55.62%. ECF 138-1 at ¶14. Defendants’ attempt to justify this 6 rate and to further move to obtain relief from the permanent injunction for all “Track 1” and 7 “Track 2” requests based on alleged changed circumstances, including: (a) the number of A-File
8 FOIA requests received; (b) USCIS failure to predict an increase in A-File FOIA requests; (c) its 9 inability to thus far hire, retain, and train sufficient permanent staff to process requests in a timely
10 manner. ECF 138 at 7-8, 11-12. Moreover, Defendants explain that they have employed the same 11 types of stop-gap measures, such as overtime, detailing other DHS personnel, and extending an 12 external contract, ECF 138 at 7-8, none of which stabilized processing rates in the past and 13 similarly failed to do so in this most recent compliance period.

16 III. LEGAL STANDARD

17 Rule 60(b) governs when a party seeks relief from a district court’s judgment, order, or 18 proceeding. Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(b). The Rule enumerates certain grounds for relief, including, as 19 relevant here, “excusable neglect,” where prospective application is “no longer equitable,” and a 20 catch-all ground for “any other reason that justifies relief.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(b)(1), (5), (6). A 21 Rule 60(b)(6) motion—the catch-all ground—“is available only when Rules 60(b)(1) through 22 (b)(5) are inapplicable.” Kemp v. United States, 142 S. Ct. 1856, 1861 (2022). All Rule 60(b)
23 motions “must be made within a reasonable time,” and a motion based on “excusable neglect”
24 cannot be filed “more than a year after the entry of the judgment or order or the date of the 25 proceeding.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(c)(1). A Rule 60(b) motion “does not affect the judgment’s 26 finality or suspend its operation.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(c)(2).
27
28

1 To prevail, the party seeking relief must demonstrate that “the statutory or decisional law
2 has changed to make legal what the decree was designed to prevent.” Rufo v. Inmates of Suffolk
3 Cty. Jail, 502 U.S. 367, 388 (1992); Sharp v. Weston, 233 F.3d 1166, 1170 (9th Cir. 2000) (“A
4 party seeking modification or dissolution of an injunction bears the burden of establishing that a
5 significant change in facts or law warrants revision or dissolution of the injunction.”) If, as here,
6 the moving party alleges a change of factual circumstances, it must demonstrate (1) that “changed
7 factual conditions make compliance with the decree substantially more onerous”; (2) that “a 8 decree proves to be unworkable because of unforeseen obstacles”; or (3) that “enforcement of the 9 decree without modification would be detrimental to the public interest.” Rufo, 502 U.S. at 384.
10 In addition, the moving party must demonstrate that the change in facts was significant and 11 unanticipated. Id. at 385; see also Bellvue Manor Assocs., 165 F.3d 1249, 1257 (9th Cir. 1999)
12 (“[W]e hold that the Rufo standard applies to all Rule 60(b)(5) petitions brought on equitable 13 grounds.”); see also Horne v. Flores, 557 U.S. 433, 447-50 (2009) (applying Rufo to enforcement
14 of injunction issued after trial and affirming a “flexible approach” to Rule 60(b)(5) motions
15 where the injunction binds state and local officials due to heightened federalism concerns); Flores
16 v. Rosen, 984 F.3d 720, 740-44 (9th Cir. 2020) (applying Rufo to government’s Rule 60(b)(5)
17 motion seeking termination of class action settlement agreement regarding the immigration 18 detention of accompanied children).

21 IV. ARGUMENT

22 A. Rule 60(b), Not 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(6)(C), Governs Defendants’ Motion

23 As set forth above, Rule 60(b) governs because Defendants are seeking relief in the form
24 of a partial stay of 6 months from this Court’s permanent injunction order and judgment, ECF 89, 25 27; ECF 90. That this stay request is partial and temporary in nature does not alter the 26 indisputable fact that Defendants are seeking this Court’s permission to relieve them of the legal 27

1 obligations to which they are bound.⁴ Defendants title their motion as a partial stay of the 2 injunction, but their stay request is nothing more than a request for relief from the permanent
3 injunction. As such, the plain language of Rule 60(b) governs Defendants’ motion. There is no
4 argument that “the statutory or decisional law has changed to make legal what the decree was 5 designed to prevent.” Rufo, 502 U.S. at 388. To the contrary, the law that Defendants continue to 6 violate remains clear. Instead, Defendants recycle arguments regarding the difficulties of practical 7 implementation, notwithstanding the fact that they previously demonstrated to the Court their 8 ability to achieve substantial compliance, timely adjudicating more than 99% of class members’
9 FOIA requests. See ECF 104 at 3; ECF 114 at 3. Instead, Plaintiffs submit that the Defendants’
10 motion is predicated on alleged “excusable neglect,” and as such, the Court should summarily 11 deny the motion as untimely because it comes “more than a year,” indeed almost two years, after 12 the final order and judgement. Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(c)(1). Should the Court construe the motion
13 based on Rule 60(b)(5) or (6), the Court should deny the motion on the merits as discussed 14 below.

17 The Court should reject Defendants’ effort to have this Court apply the standard set forth
18 in the FOIA statute at 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(6)(C).⁵ As an initial matter, Plaintiffs preserve the

21 ⁴ Defendants presumably seek to avoid a finding of civil contempt which a district court is 22 entitled to find where a party, as here, has not substantially complied with the court’s order. See
23 generally Gen. Signal Corp. v. Donallco, Inc., 787 F.2d 1376 (9th Cir. 1986); Stone v. City &
Cty. of San Francisco, 968 F.2d 850 (9th Cir. 1992); Kelly v. Wengler, 822 F.3d 1085 (9th Cir.
2016).

⁵ That statute provides:

24
25 (i) Any person making a request to any agency for records under paragraph (1), 26 (2), or (3) of this subsection shall be deemed to have exhausted his administrative 27 remedies with respect to such request if the agency fails to comply with the 28 applicable time limit provisions of this paragraph. If the Government can show exceptional circumstances exist and that the agency is exercising due diligence in responding to the request, the court may retain jurisdiction and allow the agency additional time to complete its review of the records. Upon any determination by

1 argument that the statute’s references to “any person,” “a person,” “a request,” “the request,” and 2 “such request” indicate that Congress intended the provision to apply to individual requests, not
3 pattern or practice claims in which a class has been certified. 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(6)(C)(i), (iii).

4 However, Plaintiffs recognize that this Court’s summary judgment decision “assume[s] that the 5 ‘exceptional circumstances’ and ‘due diligence’ defenses are applicable to the pattern or practice
6 claims in this case,” while also noting that Ninth Circuit case law on this point is unclear. ECF 89
7 at 15 & n.10. That said, the Court’s prior assumption does not mean Defendants can invoke the 8 defense indefinitely and certainly not after issuance of a final judgment and permanent injunction
9 order.

11 This defense—which requires a showing of both exceptional circumstances and due 12 diligence—is invoked during active litigation. Indeed, this Court already considered, and 13 rejected, Defendants arguments that the defense applies. See ECF 89 at 15-16 (stating that “a 14 reasonable fact finder could only conclude that defendants’ increasing workload was predictable” and 15 “the record [does not] demonstrate reasonable progress in reducing the backlog of pending requests”).
16 Defendants cite to no case that supports the proposition it asks the Court to accept here: that §

19 an agency to comply with a request for records, the records shall be made
20 promptly available to such person making such request. Any notification of denial 21 of any request for records under this subsection shall set forth the names and titles or positions of each person responsible for the denial of such request.

22 (ii) For purposes of this subparagraph, the term “exceptional circumstances” does 23 not include a delay that results from a predictable agency workload of requests 24 under this section, unless the agency demonstrates reasonable progress in reducing its backlog of pending requests.

25 (iii) Refusal by a person to reasonably modify the scope of a request or arrange an 26 alternative time frame for processing a request (or a modified request) under 27 clause (ii) after being given an opportunity to do so by the agency to whom the 28 person made the request shall be considered as a factor in determining whether exceptional circumstances exist for purposes of this subparagraph.

5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(6)(C) (emphasis added).

1 552(a)(6)(C) applies to an injunction post-judgment. All the cases on which Defendants rely,
2 including Open America v. Watergate Special Prosecution Force, 547 F.2d 605 (D.C. Cir. 1976),
3 involve invoking the defense against enforcement of the schedule of production as to specific
4 documents prior to final judgment. See ECF 138 at 9-11 (citing cases). Simply stated, Defendants
5 cannot now invoke an already-rejected litigation defense after the litigation has concluded, and a 6 permanent and a final judgment issued. Cf. Hernandez v. Taqueria El Grullense, No. 12-cv-03257-
7 WHO, 2014 WL 2611214 (N.D. Cal. June 11, 2014) (denying motion to reconsider attorney fee order 8 without addressing movant’s already-addressed arguments, noting “[i]t is not necessary to repeat what 9 the Order already says”). This would be especially inappropriate where, as here, Rule 60(b)
10 specifically addresses the relief that Defendants now seek.

11
12 B. Under Either Rule 60(b) or 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(6)(C), Relief from the Injunction Is 13 Unwarranted

14 Defendants fail to demonstrate a change in facts warranting relief from the injunction
15 under either Rule 60(b) or—even if it were applicable—5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(6)(C). Defendants’
16 sole claim is that they have been unable to keep up with the increase in FOIA requests over the 17 last six months and need relief from the injunction to allow them to catch up. In fact, however, 18 the increase in FOIA filings during the past six months is neither out of the ordinary nor 19 unpredictable, and Defendants’ inability to stay on top of incoming FOIA requests stems as much 20 from their own mismanagement as from the increase. Notably, after demonstrating substantial 21 compliance for the first six months, Defendants compliance rates dramatically declined—from 22 over 99% in September of 2021 to 51% and 72% over the next two quarterly reports—even 23 though the total number of new FOIA requests declined from just under 68,000 to just under 24 64,000, making clear that Defendants’ failure to comply with the injunction is not a function of 25 unforeseeable increases in A-File FOIA requests. Compare ECF 113 at 3 with ECF 119 at 3 and 26 ECF 125 at 4.
27
28

1 Moreover, relieving Defendants of their obligation to comply with the injunction would 2 be detrimental to the public, particularly the tens of thousands of class members who are 3 dependent on receipt of their A-Files for life-changing immigration benefits. Indeed, Defendants 4 repeated failure to achieve substantial compliance for more than half the time the injunction has 5 been in place is reason alone to deny the motion. Cf. Bd. of Ed. of Oklahoma City Public Schools
6 v. Dowell, 498 U.S. 237, 249 (1991) (“[I]n deciding whether to modify or dissolve a 7 desegregation decree, a school board’s compliance with previous court orders is obviously 8 relevant.”); SEC v. Coldicutt, 258 F.3d 939, 942-43 (9th Cir. 2001) (examining compliance 9 record in determining whether defendant might resume violations if injunction was terminated).
10

11 Accordingly, whether the Court applies the Rule 60(b) standard or 5 U.S.C. §
12 552(a)(6)(C), the Court should deny the motion on the merits.
13

14 1. Compliance With the Injunction Is Less Onerous Now Than When This Court
15 First Ordered It in December 2020

16 The recent increase in A-File FOIA requests has not made compliance with the injunction
17 more onerous and is not, as Defendants claim, ECF 138, an exceptional circumstance. See Flores, 18 984 F.3d at 743 (“The government has failed to demonstrate that the recent increase in family
19 migration has made complying with the Agreement’s release mandate for accompanied minors
20 ‘substantially more onerous,’ ‘unworkable,’ or ‘detrimental to the public interest.’”) (quoting 21 Rufo, 502 U.S. at 384).

22 To the contrary, compliance was more difficult for Defendants when the injunction first 23 issued, as this Court ordered both USCIS and ICE to clear their years-old backlog within 60 days,
24 while at the same time adhering to statutory deadlines for all newly filed FOIA requests. ECF 89
25 at 27; ECF 90 at 1. For USCIS, this backlog was almost 22,000, while for ICE it was almost 26 20,000. ECF 138 at 15. Moreover, USCIS was still in the early stages of its roll-out of FIRST, see 27 ECF 75 at 17 (indicating that only 50 percent of FOIA requests were being submitted through 28

1 FIRST); USCIS and ICE had only just begun operating under the Memorandum of Agreement
2 which was intended to streamline A-File FOIA processing., id. at 5-6.; and USCIS had not begun
3 the extensive hiring process it has since undertaken. See, e.g., ECF 125-1 ¶10 (attesting that, as of 4 March 2022, USCIS had converted 25 one-year positions to permanent positions and was 5 authorized to hire 24 full-time permanent positions); ECF 132-1 ¶¶16-17 (attesting that, as of 6 June 2022, the 25 positions were filled and 24 new full-term positions “have been announced”).
7 Notwithstanding these major obstacles, Defendants were able to substantially comply with the 8 injunction in the first six months it was in effect. Notably, Defendants achieved a compliance rate
9 of 99.14% in the third quarter, during which period they received 67,918 requests. ECF 113 at 3.
10

11 In contrast, the work to comply with the injunction is less onerous now. Most 12 significantly, ICE has no backlog, and USCIS has more funding and more resources at its 13 disposal. Indeed, for the 25 positions that were converted from one-year to permanent positions, 14 USCIS reported that all 25 staff started by the end of June 2022. ECF 132-1 ¶16. Despite 15 reporting in March 2022 that it had received authorization for 24 additional FOIA staff positions,
16 ECF 125-1 ¶10(e), USCIS only hired for 13 of the positions in the following six months, ECF
17 138-1 ¶23. That USCIS has not prioritized completing the hiring of 11 additional full-time FOIA 18 processors does not excuse its obligation to comply with the injunction, particularly given the 19 availability of those additional, and significant, staffing resources.
20

21 The six-month increase in FOIA filings to which Defendants attach so much significance, 22 ECF 138 at 12-14, has not made compliance with the injunction more onerous than it was in 23 December 2020, when USCIS and ICE had to address both new filings and a huge backlog of 24 pending requests. To the contrary, USCIS’ own statistics demonstrate that it has the current 25 capacity to keep up with the new filings, even without the full on-boarding of staff it has hired 26 and is in the process of hiring. ECF 138-1 ¶5 (indicating that, in the past quarter, USCIS
27
28

1 processed almost 4,000 more A-File FOIA requests than it received in the same period). This
2 alone indicates that compliance is not “substantially more onerous” than when first ordered.

3 2. The Increase in A-File FOIA Requests in the Past Six-Months Was Both
4 Predictable and Consistent with Past Increases

5 Contrary to Defendants’ claim, the recent uptick in A-File FOIA requests was entirely
6 foreseeable and is consistent with prior annual increases. As shown below, the number of A-File
7 FOIA requests has grown every fiscal year—more than quadrupling over the past 13 years—
8 except for fiscal year 2020, during the height of the Coronavirus pandemic (COVID-19).

22 ⁶ References to “DHS FOIA Reports” are to Freedom of Information Act Reports to the 23 Attorney General of the United States, which are available by fiscal year at <https://www.dhs.gov/foia-annual-reports>.

24 ⁷ Defendants previously reported the number of requests received as 195,930 in their Cross-
25 Motion for Summary Judgment but acknowledged at the time that this figure was not yet finalized. ECF 75 at 13 n.2.

26 ⁸ With only two weeks remaining in the fiscal year at the time they filed their motion, 27 Defendants nevertheless assert that the percentage increase in FOIA filings in FY 2022 could be as high as 30%. ECF 138-1 at ¶10. Defendants provide no factual support for this assertion. Id.
28 Instead, Defendants’ Fourth through Seventh Compliance Reports—which cover a year period which starts and ends only two weeks earlier than Defendants’ fiscal year—support an estimate

2 As the Office of Government Information Services (OGIS) highlighted, USCIS' FOIA receipts
3 climbed by 133 percent during the seven-year period between fiscal years 2009 and 2016. ECF
4 71-7 at 5. Since then, they have continued to climb significantly, a total of 311 percent during the 5 entire 13-year period. "It is not clear what is driving the increase in requests that USCIS receives.
6 According to USCIS FOIA leadership the agency has not been able to find a correlation between 7 the increase in FOIA requests and applications for immigration and citizenship benefits."
8 ECF 71-7 at 5.

10 Notably, however, this rise in requests has not followed a steady pattern; instead, the 11 annual percentage changes have fluctuated wildly from year to year, from a low of .45 percent 12 between fiscal years 2017 and 2018 to a high of 28.10 percent between fiscal years 2009 and 13 2010. See supra, p.14. Because of this wide fluctuation year to year, any reliable prediction of 14 future workloads must be based upon review of the total number of requests received over a span
15 of years and must contemplate large fluctuations from year to year. Defendants' view starts only 16 in fiscal year 2012, thus excluding the two years in which there were the greatest percentage 17 increases. See ECF 138-1 ¶8 (averaging annual increases between fiscal year 2012 to 2017 and 18 relegating to a footnote mention of fiscal years 2010 and 2011).

20 Taking a long-term view negates Defendants' claim that the recent uptick in A-File
21 receipts is "unparalleled," ECF 138 at 12; to the contrary, an equivalent or higher increase
22 occurred twice before, in fiscal years 2010 and 2011. See supra, p.14. Moreover, as Defendants
23 themselves acknowledge, it was predictable that the number of FOIA requests would spike
24 following the downturn experienced due to COVID-19, see ECF 138-1 ¶10 ("USCIS anticipated
25 receipts would increase as the country began to rebound from the pandemic."), and Defendants
26

28 of a 25% increase, as the total requests filed during these four reporting periods was 294,069. See
ECF 119 at 3 (65,612); ECF 125 at 2 (63,973); ECF 132 at 6 (80,000); ECF 138-1 at ¶5 (84,484).

1 should have predicted that this increase would be higher in FY 2022 given that so few people had
2 filed requests in FY 2020. Accord Agostini v. Felton, 521 U.S. 203, 215-16 (1997) (rejecting a 3 claim of changed factual circumstances based on the “exorbitant costs of complying,” because 4 both parties were “aware that additional costs would be incurred” due to the court’s judgment).
5 With the exception of FY 2020, Defendants experienced increases in numbers of A-File FOIA
6 requests each year, and significant double digit percentage increases in multiple years. Further, as 7 noted, the compliance rates began to fall not because of some unexpected dramatic increase in 8 FOIA requests. To the contrary, they began to fall at the same time the number of FOIA requests
9 began to fall. Compare ECF 113 at 3 (showing 67,918 requests received and a compliance rate of 10 99.14%) with ECF 119 at 3 (showing 65,612 requests received and a compliance rate of 51.14%)
11 and ECF 125 at 4 (showing 63,973 requests received and a compliance rate of 72.13%).
12

14 In short, as this Court previously found, “a reasonable fact finder could only conclude that 15 defendants’ increasing workload was predictable.” ECF 89 at 15.

16 3. Defendants’ Mismanagement and Delay Have Impeded Compliance

17 Agency management has in large part caused the increased backlog. Most significantly,
18 ICE’s mismanagement of approximately 13,597 A-File FOIA requests earlier this fiscal year
19 significantly impacted USCIS’ ability to stay current. ECF 132-1 ¶5. Defendants blamed this 20 mistake on “staffing shortfalls, significant personnel turnover, and a surge of new [non-A-File]
21 FOIA requests submitted to ICE.” ECF 132 at 3-4. As Defendants explained in their Sixth 22 Compliance Report, as a result of this mismanagement, USCIS had to “first review each request 23 to determine whether it was a duplicate of a request that USCIS had previously received in the 24 same timeframe,” which according to Defendants was “time-consuming.” ECF 132 at 4; ECF
25 132-1 ¶10. Following this, the non-duplicate files—approximately 5,918—had to be added to 26 USCIS’ current workload. ECF 132 at 5; ECF 132-1 ¶¶10-12. ICE’s mismanagement of this 27
28

1 significant number of files “stretched USCIS’s limited resources and reduced the time available
 2 to complete other FOIA cases in line for processing within the statutory timeframe.” ECF 138-1
 3 ¶10 n.3. These files necessarily contributed to the increase in the current backlog.

4 Defendants’ failure to prioritize and secure adequate staffing for A-File FOIAs has also 5 contributed to their failure to comply with the injunction. Following the Court’s order, during the 6 first compliance period, Defendants reported engaging approximately 116 staff from DHS
 7 components and 20 non-FOIA employees from USCIS, instructed all FOIA staff to focus on A-
 8 File processing, and approved approximately 15,105 hours of overtime. ECF 97 at 4; ECF 97-1 9 ¶¶15-19. Since then, Defendants have reported a fluctuating pattern of full-time staff dedicated to 10 A-File FOIA processing. The following chart illustrates USCIS’ full-time staffing since the 11 injunction issued.
 12

9 As illustrated here, Defendants waited a full year after the injunction both to convert the 10 short-term positions under the Memorandum of Agreement between USCIS and ICE to full-time
11 positions and to approve 24 additional full-time positions. ECF 125-1 ¶10(c), (e). At the same 12 time, Defendants also stopped reporting the number of staff filling the 22 permanent positions in 13 USCIS’ FOIA office authorized to be filled in January 2021. ECF 125-1; ECF 132-1; ECF 138-1.
14 Defendants attest that in the last three months, seven FOIA staff members “retired, accepted 15 another position, or left the FOIA program” and that 31 “new staffers have entered on duty” and 16 10 will start “shortly” after the end of the reporting period. ECF 138-1 ¶¶23-24.¹² It is unclear if 17 these staff departed from the positions authorized to be filled in 2021. However, in the 31 alleged 18 new staffers, USCIS appears to count some of the 25 staff (between 10-14 people) who were 19 previously on one-year contracts which were later converted to permanent positions. Defendants 20 do not explain why these existing FOIA processors are treated as “newly-hired” and must 21 “undergo substantial training before they can operate at full capacity.” ECF 138 at 17 (citing ECF 22 138-1 ¶26).
23

24 Furthermore, Defendants report a budget enhancement set to begin on October 1, 2022, 25

27 ¹¹ During this compliance period, 6 RAIO and 2 DHS contract staff were detailed to FOIA
28 processing. ECF 138-1 ¶19.

¹² It is not clear from the report which positions the 10 staff who will start “shortly” will fill.

1 ECF 138 at 7, but offer no explanation as to why it took Defendant USCIS almost two years since
2 the injunction to approve this budget item. See ECF 138-1 ¶31 (noting that USCIS FOIA office
3 “[r]ecently” requested additional funding which the USCIS Director “approved” on September
4 14, 2022, a day before Defendants filed their motion). Given Defendants’ poor track record when 5 operating with the injunction, without the Court’s injunction in place, it is likely USCIS
6 processing times will slip further and 2023 enhancements will be devoted to eradicating backlogs
7 and attempting to regain what limited successes have been achieved under the injunction. Where 8 Defendants’ own actions have made compliance with an injunction more difficult, relief from the 9 injunction is not warranted.¹³

11 4. Relief from the Injunction Would Harm Plaintiffs and Class Members

12 Last, but not least, this Court’s injunction provides relief to Plaintiffs and tens of 13 thousands of class members who depend on receipt of their Track 1 or Track 2 A-File FOIA 14 requests. As the Supreme Court reiterated in Horne, “Rule 60(b)(5) . . . provides a means by 15 which a party can ask a court to modify or vacate a judgment or order if ‘a significant change
16 either in factual conditions or in law’ renders continued enforcement ‘detrimental to the public 17 interest.’” 557 U.S. at 447 (quoting Rufo, 502 U.S. at 384). As such, granting the motion would 18 be unwarranted even if there had been a dramatic increase in FOIA requests that was not 19 foreseeable—which Plaintiffs have demonstrated did not occur, see supra § IV.B.2. Continued
20 enforcement is both necessary to protect the public interest, namely the interests of persons
21 requiring copies of their A-files in order to pursue or maintain lawful immigration status in this 22
23
24

25 ¹³ Similarly, even were 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(6)(C) applicable, Defendants cannot show either
26 reasonable efforts or due diligence towards reducing the backlog when the increase in the backlog 27 is a result of their own mismanagement. See, e.g., Munger, Tolles & Olson LLP v. U.S. Dep’t of 28 Army, 58 F. Supp. 3d 1050, 1056 (C.D. Cal. 2014) (refusing to “excuse the Army’s excessive delay simply because it has not created efficient mechanisms for referring FOIA requests to the appropriate entity”).

country.

Importantly, for those who are not in removal proceedings (and for those who are, but fail to attach proof of those proceedings to their FOIA requests for any variety of reasons), the results of A-File FOIA requests in Track 1 or Track 2 are critical to: (a) assessing and demonstrating eligibility for immigration benefits, such as immigration applications to gain, maintain, or change legal status or to seek protection from persecution or torture; (b) timely responding to immigration agency requests for further evidence or a notice of intent to deny an immigration benefit; (c) assessing and demonstrating eligibility for U.S. citizenship; and/or (d) facilitating travel. See ECF 70 at 3-4.

In sum, having already recognized the importance of A-Files and the function they serve in the immigration context, see ECF 89 at 1, 5-6, the Court should not relieve Defendants of their obligation to comply with the injunction, which would harm Plaintiffs and class members by depriving them of timely access to the records they need for life-changing immigration benefits.

V. CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, the Court should deny Defendants’ motion for partial relief from the permanent injunction and award Plaintiffs’ counsel attorneys’ fees for time spent responding to the motion.
